It is our pleasure to present this edition of the International Journal of Educational and Psychological Sciences (IJEPS)—a peer-reviewed academic platform committed to advancing knowledge, research, and practice in the fields of education and psychology.

In an era marked by rapid social, technological, and cultural change, the intersection of educational and psychological sciences plays a critical role in shaping human development, academic achievement, mental health, and lifelong learning. Through interdisciplinary inquiry and evidence-based analysis, this journal aims to contribute meaningful insights that inform policy, enhance educational systems, and improve psychological well-being across diverse contexts.

The IJEPS serves as a forum for researchers, scholars, educators, psychologists, and practitioners to share innovative ideas, empirical studies, and theoretical frameworks that deepen our understanding of human behavior, learning processes, mental health, instructional strategies, and the psychological dimensions of education.

This issue brings together a range of scholarly articles that reflect the breadth and depth of current research in these fields. Topics include, but are not limited to, cognitive development, educational assessment, psychological resilience, teacher effectiveness, learning environments, and mental health interventions. Each contribution has undergone a rigorous peer-review process to ensure academic quality, originality, and relevance.

We extend our sincere appreciation to the authors for their valuable work, the reviewers for their expert evaluation and feedback, and the editorial board for their continuous dedication and guidance.

We hope that the research presented in this issue will inspire continued academic inquiry, inform practical applications, and contribute to the global dialogue on education and psychological science.

Happy Reading
